ASCO is an approved SARS Public Benefit Organisation (PBO), reference no. 930092287. ASCO's Section 18A application remains pending and this document does not represent that Section 18A approval has been granted.

Organisation and purpose

African Solidarity Civic Organisation NPC (ASCO NPC) is a South African non-profit company established to advance public-benefit objectives through education and development, welfare and humanitarian support, cultural development, and conservation and environmental protection. ASCO's programmes are intended to respond to identified community needs and to promote dignity, inclusion, social responsibility, sustainable development and African solidarity. This explanation is prepared in support of ASCO's Section 18A application and should be read together with the organisation's registered founding document and applicable governance documents.

1. Education and Development — main programme

ASCO's main programme is Education and Development. Through this programme, ASCO undertakes and develops community education, public-awareness activities, workshops, information-sharing, capacity-building, leadership and community-development initiatives. Topics and activities are selected according to identified community needs and ASCO's public-benefit objectives. Activities may be delivered through community sessions, awareness campaigns, educational materials, volunteers and partnerships with relevant community organisations, public institutions, businesses and civil-society organisations. Intended beneficiaries include community members, young people, volunteers, vulnerable groups and the wider public.

2. Welfare and Humanitarian Support

ASCO's welfare and humanitarian work is intended to support vulnerable individuals and communities through needs-based public-benefit interventions. Depending on identified needs and available resources, activities may include humanitarian assistance, relief coordination, emergency response, community support and initiatives that strengthen community resilience. ASCO may coordinate with community structures, relevant authorities, donors and partner organisations to identify needs and organise appropriate assistance. Beneficiaries may include individuals, families and communities experiencing hardship or affected by emergencies or disasters.

3. Conservation, Environment and Animal Welfare

ASCO promotes environmental awareness, conservation, environmental protection and responsible stewardship of natural resources. Activities may include community education, environmental campaigns, clean-up activities, waste-awareness initiatives and initiatives intended to protect aquatic, coastal and other ecosystems. ASCO conducted Operation Protect Our Aquatic Ecosystem at Richards Bay Beachfront, King Cetshwayo District, KwaZulu-Natal, on 22 September 2026. The campaign included environmental awareness and a beachfront clean-up and was supported by SPAR Empangeni. Future activities will depend on community needs, resources and partnerships. Animal-welfare activities should be described as current activities only where ASCO has actually undertaken or formally planned them; this document does not claim that a separate animal-welfare programme has already been implemented.

4. Cultural Development

ASCO promotes African solidarity, Ubuntu, cultural understanding, social cohesion, respect for cultural diversity and peaceful coexistence. Depending on community needs and resources, activities may include cultural awareness, community dialogues, educational engagements, promotion of shared African values and initiatives encouraging inclusion and mutual respect. These activities may be undertaken through community engagement, educational programmes and partnerships with relevant stakeholders.

Implementation and beneficiaries

Activities are coordinated through ASCO's governance and management arrangements and may be delivered by authorised personnel, volunteers, community participants and partner organisations. The Board provides governance oversight while Executive Management is responsible for operational management. Activities are intended to benefit the public or appropriate sections of the public, particularly communities and people experiencing vulnerability or barriers to participation. ASCO should retain evidence of activities, such as plans, attendance records where appropriate, photographs, reports, partner correspondence, expenditure records and monitoring information.

Funding, use of resources and accountability

ASCO may seek lawful donations, grants, sponsorships and other permissible support to fund its public-benefit activities. Resources received for public-benefit purposes are to be applied to those purposes in accordance with ASCO's founding document, approved policies, applicable law, donor restrictions and internal financial controls. Funds are not intended for distribution to directors or members for personal benefit. ASCO maintains or is developing appropriate financial records, approval controls, supporting documentation and monitoring arrangements to demonstrate how resources are received and applied.

Relationship to the Section 18A application

ASCO's application identifies Education and Development as its main programme and also selects Welfare and Humanitarian, Cultural, and Conservation, Environment and Animal Welfare. This narrative is organised to reflect those selected categories. It describes the organisation's purposes and programme approach without asserting that every possible activity has already been carried out. ASCO should ensure that all statements match its actual operations, approved founding documents and supporting records before submission. Section 18A approval remains pending unless and until SARS issues written approval; this document does not claim that donations to ASCO are currently eligible for Section 18A tax-deductible receipts.
